Curriculum Vitae

The architecture does not end there where lies a building. It is a process of social and moral understanding of the space around us, on which we are going to handle and where we're going to live. An idea of architecture willing to come to terms with the needs, tastes, belief, and trends of a society and a modern living, completely characterized by a social dynamism constantly evolving. Architecture as a social and technical formalization of the spaces of modern Zlife. A complex architecture but by the simplicity of the contents, where the form and function are only some of the essential features of a building, equal to more or less important concepts, such as for example sustainability, the site, size, or even the colour.
